Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a historical document or manuscript. The text is written on aged, yellowed paper and is mostly illegible due to fading and damage. There are two distinct circular holes visible in the center of the page, suggesting it was once bound or used as a folder. The script appears to be a form of early modern European cursive, possibly from the 16th or 17th century.

The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the car was the cold. It was a sharp, biting cold that seemed to seep into my bones. I shivered as I walked towards the entrance of the building.
 The door was open, and a warm glow emanated from within. I hesitated for a moment, then pushed the door open and stepped inside. The warmth was comforting, but I noticed a few people looking at me. I felt a bit out of place. I walked towards the reception desk, where a woman smiled at me. She asked me what I was looking for, and I told her I was looking for Mr. Smith. She led me to his office, where I found him sitting at his desk. He looked up at me and smiled. I told him about the car and the cold. He laughed and said, "Welcome to the company. We're glad to have you." I felt a bit better. I decided to stay for a while and see what the company was like.
 I stayed in the office for a few hours, and I noticed that the people here were friendly and helpful. I was starting to feel like I belonged. I decided to stay here for good.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely Persian or Urdu, spanning the length of the strip. The text is arranged in approximately 10 horizontal lines. The script is dense and flowing, with some variations in line spacing.
